Take Hall's Family Fills for constipation Prof. J. F. Kemp, head of the department of geology at Columbia university, New York, discussing the disaster at Kingston, Jamaica, said: "The earthquake was no doubt due to what is known in geology as a fault, as was the cause at San Francisco. There is a great crack or fissure formed, one side of which slips from the other, either in a downward or a sideward direction. At San Francisco there was a slide to one side. The coast of Cuba, from Santiago eastward, is very abrupt and precipitous and gives an area of decided fault. Probably the tidal wave which usualy accompanies an earthquake shock has been the cause of the damage. This is more destructive to cities on the coast line than the shock itself. It is produced by a sudden shaking beneath the sea, which starts a great rolling upon the land. I don't know of any recent shocks that we would be justified in connecting with this one. The Samoan islands are too far away, and it is not likely that the recent disturbance there is identified with that at Kingston. We need not feel any anxiety in New York on account of earthquakes, because we have never had any important shocks have never had any important shocks and we seem to be pretty solid. We are not in a region of earthquakes shocks along this coast, and do not enticipate them. They are vastly more prevalent on the Pacific coast. Earthquakes are occurring somewhere almost all the time. We would not have attached so much importance to the one recently at San Francisco had it not been for the onflagration.

THE HEART IN ACTION.

in a New York Museum.

A Model Showing Its Operation on View

An excellent opportunity to study the working of the human heart is offered by a model put on exhibition by Dr. Carroll Henderson at the scientific exposition in the American Museum of Natural History.

The model is made of rubber and glass tubing. By means of pressure attachments a blood colored liquid is sent pulsing through the various closely related chambers, and all the normal movements of the organ are reproduced THE movements of the organ are reproduced as in life; and not only this, but the sounds of the valves. Moreover, it is capable of producing movements and sounds eaused by various kinds of heart disease. On applying the ear to the cardiac region two successive sounds are heard, called the first and second sounds, and which may be expressed by the syllables lubb dup. When the vaives are affected by disease the normal sounds may be intensified or weakmal sounds may be intensified or weak ened, or they may disappear entirely and be replaced by murmers, or abuse mal sounds may be heard simultaneous

TRAINED ROOSTER.

Little Girl in West Brattleboro Has Exceptional Bird.

Roosters are not unknown as pets, but little Ruth Prentiss of West Bratleboro, has an exceptional rouster, Teddy, in that he will allow her to do anything that she may wish with him. In the first place the way this little mistress manages her hig playfellow is extremely interesting. She never pun-ishes him because he never needs a rebuke. She speaks to him in a quiet tone, but there is in her eyes a certain power of the will, a power which is rare in children, which forces him to submit to her kind, though sometimes odd treatment.

For instance, in the morning he struti into the kitchen and with a jolly "crowing" mounts the low table at Ruth's command, steps in to the wash-Buth's command, steps in to the wash-bowl and patiently submits to a thor-ongh sponging with soap and water. After haking his feathers a bit he is dried off with a towel and is then brushed until his "coat" shines bright

Then follows another one of her favorite pastimes. She hitches Teddy to her small doll-cart, with ribbon shafts puts on ribbon reins "for effect," and drives her noble steed by "haw" and "gee" out through the woodshed, down the front yard to the sidewalk, just for "iaunt."

Oftentimes this little girl and her pet may be seen on the street, both with tiny white hoods crowning their heads. Ruth has had this stange comrade for several years and has trained him entirely herself. Teddy shows a great foundness for his young mistress, and obeys her without the least hesitancy.

CZAR RETAINS MARTIAL RULE. To Give No Compensation to Injured Foreignera.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 22.-- An imperial ukase issued Sunday prolongs the state of extraordinary protection in the city and government of St. Petersburg for another six months and in the Don Cossack country for another year. An imperial ordinance directs that the election to Parliament in the city of St. Petersburg shall be held March 1. The first stage of the parliamentary elections show the workmen are voting in an enormous ma-jority for the Social Democrats.

The Russian government has just sent out a circular note to the powers re-garding the claims of foreigners who have suffered by the trouble in Russia. The Russian government declares that it will pay no compensation, but that the foreigners in question have the right to bring civil action against the administrative official who failed to give them protection. The relatives of the Austrian frontier guard who was killed by a Rusian soldier have been informed
